

Washington Environmental Council is a nonprofit, statewide advocacy organization. For over 50 years, WEC has brought people together to solve Washington's most critical environmental issues.

WEC builds power for the environmental movement in Washington by building partnerships, mobilizing the public, connecting voters to decision makers, and—when strategic—taking legal action.

Our mission is to protect, restore, and sustain Washington's environment for all.

Climate & Clean Energy

We are committed to equitable climate action by working to reduce climate pollution and creating a just transition to a clean energy economy.

Fossil Fuels

As we fight against new oil, coal, and gas terminals, we are supporting solutions to build the clean energy economy and ensure safe transport of existing fossil fuels through our region.

Puget Sound

By reducing harmful pollution and restoring habitat and shorelines, we can safeguard a healthy, livable Salish Sea region for people, orca, and salmon.

Evergreen Forests

By protecting state forests, creating incentives to sustainably manage our private forests, and holding elected officials and industrial landowners accountable, Washington can remain the Evergreen State.

Racial & Environmental Justice

We believe that environmental justice is not possible without racial justice and economic justice. For this reason, we center equity in our work, and we strengthen our relationships with partners who work on climate action, social justice, and equal access to voting in Washington.

We partner with:

WASHINGTON
CONSERVATION

Our partner organization, Washington Conservation Voters, works to elect pro-environment candidates and hold elected officials accountable. With one shared CEO, our organizations work in partnership as each pursues its unique mission.
